SHOW CAVES OF CANADA

AND THE

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

By: Gary K. Soule
NSS 11198 LF
ASHA No. 126

The first time that I ever published an extensive listing of both currently operating and ex-commercial show cave attractions was in the May, 1976, issue of the NSS NEWS. (Volume 34, Number 5, pages 88 through 91.) More recently, I published an updated and revised listing in the April, 1984, issue of THE WISCONSIN SPELEOLOGIST. (Volume 19, Number 1, pages 34 through 58.)

Since this time, I have been extremely fortunate in obtaining a great deal more of detailed information from my regular travels, research work, libraries, various caving and grotto publications, extensive letter writing, newspaper and magazine articles, and personal contacts with friends. Through my continued efforts to establish a complete listing of all show caves in Canada and the United States, the general awareness of show cave operations has been greatly increased. This increased awareness is not only among cavers, but the general public as well. Ex-commercial show caves have in particular been "rescued" from historical obscurity.

What follows is an updated listing of all currently operating and former show cave operations, showing a considerable number of additions. Also shown are additional former cave names, and changes or omissions from my first two attempts at creating and publishing such an extensive list.

Show caves are opening and closing all the time. Even the names of the caves change more often than fully realized! I imagine some errors still might exist, and I would appreciate hearing from anyone who has information in this regard. It seems even cavers and fellow speleologists cannot always agree on some details due to the vague and often conflicting information that may, of may not, be available. For example, one prominent South Dakota cave historian clearly illustrated how one commercial or show cave operation has inadvertently been given different variations for its cave name over the years. Here I quote his comments in regards to one such South Dakota show cave:

"The attraction that opened as Stage Barn Cavern became referred to as Stagebarn Cavern, Stage Barn Caverns, Stagebarn Caverns, Stagebarn Crystal Cavern, Stage Barn Crystal Caverns, Stage Barn Cave, Stagebarn Cave, Stagebarn Crystal Caverns, and now, Stage Barn Crystal Cave. Surprisingly, it has never been called Stage Barn Crystal Caves!"
Also, as noted by this same respected show cave historian, some ex-commercial caves might appear on a list of show caves, when in fact, they really were just a marginal or semi-commercial venture. An example might be Blue Rock Crystal Cave or what is sometimes referred to as “Blue Rock Crystal Mine”. While it was a wild, 170 foot long cave, it was mined for its calcite spar crystals for local South Dakota rock specimen shops. The cave was discovered by road building crews in the Black Hills. Since this cave has been mentioned in print, does have some walking passageway, was briefly very popular and mined for maybe a year or two in the late 1930's, it is very easy to see why it could possibly be mistaken and appear to be a show cave of sorts.

Despite the problem of identifying the true bona fide show caves and their past names, I still would appreciate having anyone with comments on this show cave listing to contact me. I would prefer that cavers or speleologists write me, but I am listing my phone number as well. I may be reached by mail at: 224 South 7th Avenue, Sturgeon Bay, Wisconsin 54235. My phone number is 1 - (414) 743-6488.

This list, with possibly two exceptions, consists entirely of naturally formed caves or caverns. All mines, artificial caves, or other man-made cavities have been omitted. If a natural cave was involved, despite the fact that man did some enlarging, it was included. Also, semi-wild caves that are advertised for tourist viewing and usually exist in public parks, are included as well. Those caves with a  before their names are no longer operating or are closed down at the present time. Former names of the commercial or show caves are noted in alphabetical order after the nearest city to the cave. If the cave is part of a city, county, regional, or state park, or is federally owned, such as a national park or monument, this is also listed. All caves not in limestone are noted accordingly. “NCA” means the cave is a current member of the National Caves Association. Currently a total of seventy-one outstanding show caves, located in twenty-one different U.S. states, are members. Many show cave owners and managers are also members of the National Speleological Society.

All show caves and caverns that have been officially designated as National Natural Landmarks by the U.S. Department of the Interior, are noted accordingly, and include the code “NNL”. The month and year of this important designation are noted also. A total of twenty-seven show caves or caverns have received this outstanding designation based upon their exceptionally unique features on a national level. These show caves or caverns are located in eleven different U.S. states.

One cave is also noted as a World Heritage Site, and the month and year of this world recognition are also noted. (See Mammoth Cave in Kentucky.)
