HAMiLTON CAVE is located in the John Hulley Cave Preserve in Pendleton County, West Virginia. At approximately 4.5 miles, it is the longest of the caves on the property, and has 280 feet of vertical extent, dropping 100 feet down by the kiva and down by the kiva west. The floor map was drawn by David West. Hamilton Cave in a series of the survey conducted by surveying and mapping of the H.C. Quail of the W.R.C. Important views by David West.
TROUT ROCK FORT

The Trout Rock Fort was one in the chain of forts that the Virginia House of Burgesses in March 1756 directed Washington to erect for the defense of settlers in the South Branch Valley. It also marks the end of Gen. Stonewall Jackson's pursuit of the Federals after the Battle of McDowell. May 12, 1862. On this site during the War Between the States, gunpowder was made from saltpeter obtained in a nearby cave.
